Kashif is the founder of the free online technological training platform, URDU IT Academy. With more than 2 million viewers a month, it has become one of the largest free training platforms in the subcontinent. He started with the humble background of a village based in Sargodha, so Kashif believes in the power of education and believes that it is the right of anyone who desires it, regardless of race, religion, ethnicity or gender.

Kashif has reviewed, advised on, and managed programs of security management system improvement at both the corporate and entity level, and developed corporate security policies, associated standards and corporate security governance, performance management awareness programs and assurance frameworks in internal and outsourced contexts .

In addition to his professional endeavors, he also has a strong interest in the academic aspect of cybersecurity. He writes for Information Security Professional Magazine from US ISC2 and works closely with MS and PHD students from the Universities of West London and Royal Holloway to aid in academic research within the cybersecurity field.
